

MOLEY RESIGNATION UPSETS F. D. R.'S ADMINISTRATION

President Withholds Comment
On Quitting of "Brain Trust" Head

FRIENDS ALSO SILENT

Differed With Many; Hull
Strongly Opposed Policies
Advocated by Moley

(By International News Service)

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Aug. 28.—President Roosevelt observed a rather upset administration organization from his home here today, but withheld comment on the startling resignation of his "brain trust" head, Assistant Secretary of State Raymond Moley. There was still a studied silence among the President's friends here, resulting from the dramatic announcement that Moley would give up his State Department office and become associated with Vincent Astor in the establishment of a national weekly publication. Technically, the resignation will be effective in September; actually, the former State Department official will settle down to work in an editorial capacity with Astor immediately.

The erstwhile college professor was known to have found among those associated with him, including Secretary of State Hull, persons who differed violently with him on economics. Hull was one of those who strongly opposed the policies Moley stood for and furthered when the two attended the London Economic Conference. When they returned, there were insistent rumors that the State Department was not big enough for the two of them. In the light of this, a move of President Roosevelt's which took Moley temporarily away from the State Department and assigned him to the drafting of a crime law synopsis designed to aid the Federal Government in eradicating gangsters and kidnappers, was thought to have solved the problem of the Hull-Moley difficulties. As a consequence, the announcement that Moley would resign came as a complete surprise. A letter from Moley to the President and Mr. Roosevelt's letter accepting the resignation of his Assistant Secretary of State were made public, but threw little light on the real reason for the shift.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 28.—The resignation of Assistant Secretary of State Raymond Moley, head of the Roosevelt "brain trust," announced from New York, came as a distinct surprise to Secretary of State Hull the latter declared today. Although Moley and Hull were so far apart in their views on foreign policies that a place was found for the professor in the Justice Department, Hull was emphatic in declaring Moley's resignation from the State Department had never been suggested by him to President Roosevelt.

COUNCIL OPPOSES NEW WATER PLANT

Morrisville Not Favorable To State Demands to Rebuild
The System

CONFERENCE IS CALLED

MORRISVILLE, Aug. 28.—Because the State Board of Health gave its approval to plans for the erection of the present filtration plant here 10 years ago, some borough officials are now objecting to the attitude and demands of the State for the changes or alterations at the plant now.

It is held that the engineers for the State should not have approved original plans if there was to be a demand for such drastic changes in 10 years' time.

The State department holds that the plant is too small for the needs of the borough. They are urging and almost demanding that the clear water wells, settling basin and sedimentation basin be enlarged or new basins built, and that drastic changes be made in the construction of the pipe lines in the plant. The engineers say that with the present equipment the water cannot be properly treated and the work for the filter beds is too great.

Because of the complaint of the State body, Common Council engaged an engineer to draw plans for making the necessary changes at the water plant and these range in cost from about $18,000 to $85,000. For the smaller figure the changes to be made include the pumping units while the latter calls for rebuilding the entire plant.

The municipality recently had a new water standpipe erected to provide a large storage plant for water and it is believed that Common Council will be willing to go along and provide a change in the pumping arrangement. Further changes seem out of the question now. Members of council are interested in providing an adequate supply of pure water and have expressed belief that this is being done and that it is unfair for the State to force any heavy expenditure on the borough at this time. The $85,000 proposition would require a vote of the people at a special election.

Council will meet with the representatives of the State Department of Health in the near future and the whole matter will be discussed.

3500 BACK AT WORK IN PHILA.

Philadelphia, Aug. 28.—Thirty-five hundred workers in three Philadelphia factories returned to work today under terms of strike-settling agreements calling for higher wages and in two cases, union recognition. The mills affected are the National Biscuit Company and the Eclipse Needles Shirt Company. Union recognition was granted by the biscuit, and radio companies both of which will operate on a 35 hour week basis. Settlement of the Eclipse Needle strike in which more than a score were injured and many arrested, gives workers the opportunity to decide whether or not they desire a union or a non-union shop.

TO ATTEND MILK CONFERENCE

Philadelphia, Aug. 28.—Several thousand Eastern Pennsylvania farmers today made plans to attend public hearings on the new and controversial Philadelphia Milk Shed agreement beginning here next Wednesday morning. The announcement from Washington that Dr. Clyde L. King, Federal milk administrator would preside at the hearings brought a new storm of complaint from leaders of the United Farmers' Protective Association who have been demanding Dr. King's removal.

H. D. Allebach, president of the United Milk Producers' Association, estimated five thousand members will be present, while Lewis R. Bentley, head of the United Farmers' Protective Association, said 3,000 of its members will be present, to see they are given "fair play."

It was said the Governor was studying the advisability of proceeding under Act 276 passed at the last session of the legislature which requires distributors to submit to the State Secretary of Agriculture, reports on the prices paid for and received by purchase and sale of milk.

EMILIE WINS ELEVENTH STRAIGHT BALL GAME

Trounces Chew Cardinals By The Score of 18
to 5

CUBANS ARE DEFEATED

Emilie A. registered its eleventh straight win on the Emilie field yesterday afternoon, trouncing the Chew Cardinals, of Philadelphia, 18-5. The Emilie nine had the visitors, 1800 until the ninth when the hurler began to lob the ball to the plate to enable the visitors to connect.

"Vic" Rockhill with a double and three singles led the winners' attack of eighteen hits. Afflerbach had two singles and a home run. His homer came in the fifth with two runners on base.

The Cubans, champions of the Bristol Suburban League, met defeat at the hands of the Washington A. A. on St. Ann's field. Final score was 13-12. Rallies in the sixth and seventh innings which netted ten runs did the trick for the winners.

"Jim" Spencer, colored hurler, had pitched brilliantly until the fatal innings. He was relieved by Thompson in the eighth who finished the game. Antonelli, starting pitcher for Washington, gave way to Wilkinson in the sixth.

A hurling duel between Joe Kohler and "Bill" Sullivan ended in a victory for the former yesterday afternoon at Edgely as Edgely A. C. stopped the Tullytown A. A. for the second straight week. Final count was 3-1.

Kohler allowed the losers only two hits and fanned nine batters, without issuing a pass. Sullivan gave up three hits and fanned six. Sullivan was given good support in the pinches. "Tuffy" Updike coming through with several nice steps to retire runners on close plays.

"Dykes" Manzo led the hitters, getting two singles in three trips to the plate. He drove in two of the winners' three tallies.

The Newport Road Men's Club again took the Jones A. C. into camp on the Newportville field. The score this time was 13-0 with "Milt" Davis whitewashing the Jones with six hits.

The winners made eighteen hits. Heston leading the attack with four hits while Crossley and Clansy had three each. "Jack" Ritter was the losers' best with two out of four.

LANGHORNE - MIDDLETOWN SCHOOLS OPEN SEPT. 7TH

High School Year Shortened from Ten to Nine and
One-Half Months

HAVE MADE REPAIRS

LANGHORNE, Aug. 28.—The Langhorne-Middletown public schools will open the new term on Thursday, September 7th. This date is later than usual due to the shortening of the high school year from ten to nine and one-half months. The new school calendar provides for an extra two days at Easter and one during Schoolmen's Week in March. Graduation will be on June 14th and closing day on June 15th.

Pupils will register on Thursday morning, September 7th, at which time books and supplies will be distributed. There will be no afternoon session.

The board of directors has made the usual improvements and repairs to all buildings. All desks have been cleaned and varnished and some needed equipment has been added, including new drinking fountains, volley ball courts, books, desks, and other furniture. Science apparatus, especially for the physics class, will permit of better and more experimental work.

All children who will be six years of age on or before December 31st, 1933, will report to Miss Lentz with vaccination and birth certificates. No child will be admitted who fails to present either of these two papers.

High school students will register and prepare class schedules in the morning. Those who have conflicts or need other help in choosing subjects will consult with their deans in the afternoon. Regular classes will begin promptly on Friday.

Both sixth grades will report to Miss Bowers and Miss Davenport at the Friends' building.

Bus transportation will be limited to those children who live more than one mile from the school.

The estimated enrollment for the two districts is approximately 785, distributed as follows: Edgely, 35; Parkland, 135; Langhorne grade, 385; high school, 230; total, 785.

St. Ann's Athletic Association Gives Ball Team Outing

Two hundred members of St. Ann's Athletic Association enjoyed an outing given to the baseball team on Kuster's Farm yesterday. During the course of the afternoon a large trophy was presented to Manager Francis Missera by Thomas Juno, representing the Bristol Twilight League.

Games were played, these including: quilts, bocce, baseball and cards. The feature of the afternoon was the tug-of-war between the married and single men. The married men captured the event.

Wrestling matches were held and vocal solos were given by Ralph Palermo, Philip De Risi, Eugene Squillace, Francis Missera, William Spezzano, Joseph Veland, Dominick Martino and Anthony Russo. Frank Delia was accompanist with the banjo.

Refreshments were served and before the day ended a drive was begun to fully equip the football team for this season. "Mike" De Risi was appointed coach of the football squad, while Anthony Russo and Patsy Mof were appointed as chairmen of the athletic committee.

SON IS BORN

Congratulations are being received by Mr. and Mrs. Julia Gancalz upon the birth of a son born this morning at the Harriman Hospital.

Son of Bristol Resident Weds Philadelphia Girl

John Gurdon Steele, Jr., of Elmira, N. Y., son of Dr. John G. Steele, of this borough, took as his bride at four p. m., Saturday, Miss Marie Eva Hinterleiter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Hinterleiter, 1232 S. 57th street, Philadelphia. The ceremony took place at the home of Mrs. L. V. Lamb, 402 W. Church street, Elmira, N. Y.

The groom, who has on numerous occasions visited in Bristol, is a graduate of St. Johns, The Manlius School of Manlius, N. Y., and received an A. B. degree from the University of Pennsylvania in June, 1930. For the past year he has been employed as assistant to the secretary of the Elmira Association of Commerce. He plans to enter the Medical School at the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, on September 25th.

The bride is a graduate of the Combs Conservatory of Music, Philadelphia, and at present is accompanist to Philip W. Cooke, well-known Philadelphia tenor. The former Miss Hinterleiter is frequently heard over Philadelphia radio stations as an accompanist and solo pianist.

A few relatives and friends attended the wedding ceremony, which was followed by a reception at the Lamb residence.

Mr. Steele and bride left after the reception for a trip through parts of Canada and to the World's Fair in Chicago. They will return via Elmira early in September, and be at home at 1232 S. 57th street, Philadelphia, after September 10th.

Loose Beasts Make Picture Dangers Real; Here Tonight

"Murders in the Zoo" is the title of an interesting picture coming to the Grand Theatre tonight. It is a melodrama featuring Charlie Ruggles, Lionel Atwill, Kathleen Burke, the "Panther Woman," Randolph Scott, John Lodge and Gail Patrick, in leading roles.

One of the most dangerous motion picture scenes ever filmed was made at the Paramount Hollywood studios recently, when nineteen lions, pumas, panthers, leopards and hyenas were released together in a single enclosure for "Murders in the Zoo."

Three weeks of preparation, during which the animals were allowed to get accustomed to each other in neighboring cages, preceded the actual filming. Sturdy fences were placed around the setting to give the crew space for cameras.

Four animal trainers, who, according to the script, were to drive the beasts back into cages, entered the enclosure, and for an hour, while cameras ground, they sweated at the task. They had to work almost back to back to guard against attack from the rear. Three leopards and one puma found hiding places in dark corners, however, and would not return to their cages without a vicious struggle.

The scene is a climax of the picture—the debacle that follows when the sadistic madman, the central character, faced with evidence proving him responsible for several murders, turns loose all the animals in the zoo, during an effort to escape.

CADETS AGAIN WIN STATE CHAMPIONSHIP

Make Wonderful Showing in Parade and Competition at Philadelphia

BRING FAME TO BRISTOL

The American Legion Cadets were again crowned champions of the junior corps of the State of Pennsylvania Saturday when they walked away with the honors by scoring 2½ points more than their nearest rivals, Imhoff Post, of Philadelphia.

The Bristol Cadets will parade through the streets of Bristol tomorrow night with their championship cup and will then be feted by the Cadet Boosters Association in the Bracken Post Home.

Commander Harry Burbank gave the highest praise today to his proteges. "You know when you drill a group of boys you sometimes become disgusted but then when they go out on parade and do exactly as you tell them, you feel highly gratified."

Mr. Burbank has worked tirelessly with the boys and he certainly feels very well pleased over their success.

The Bristol cadets were given great applause as they marched through the streets of Philadelphia on Saturday and as they passed the reviewing stand at Independence Hall, not only Governor Pinchot arose to his feet but everyone in the judges stand did so, as the Bristol organization passed in review.

In the competition in which the Cadets won for the second time the state championship, the following corps and the points scored were as follows:

Bristol, 80.50; Imhoff, 78; Upper Darby, 77.50; Olney, 77; Steelton, 75.10; Post 624, 74.50; Post 25, 72.70; Post 29, 72.55; Post 319, 71.75; Harrisburg Post, 596, 29.50.

Mr. Burbank says that the organization is still in need of money.

CONGRESSMAN WATSON, 77, DIES OF HEART ATTACK

Funeral Will Be Held Tomorrow
Afternoon from His Home in Langhorne

IN CONGRESS 19 YEARS

An Eminent Representative of
One of the Oldest Families
in Bucks County

LANGHORNE, Aug. 28.—Hon. Henry Winfield Watson, representative in Congress from the ninth congressional district, including Bucks and Lehigh counties, died at his home, Beechwood, East Maple avenue, at 4.30 a. m., yesterday. He was 77 years of age.

Death was due to heart disease and followed an illness of a few weeks. With him at the time of his death were his wife, Mrs. Cornelia Winder Watson.

Mr. Watson was elected to Congress last year for the 10th time defeating his Democratic opponent in the face of other Democratic victories.

Mr. Watson was first elected to Congress in 1914 from the eighth district which then included Bucks and Montgomery counties. He was outstanding in service in Washington, having served upon many important committees including the Ways and Means Committee of which he was a member when he died. He was a protective tariff advocate.

In March, 1930, Mr. Watson was named chairman of the National Republican Club by Senator Watson, of Indiana, club president at the time.

Funeral services will be held in the Watson home tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock with the Rev. Waldo D. Parker, rector of Langhorne Protestant Episcopal Church, officiating. Interment will be private in the Watson family plot in the Brandywine Cemetery, in accordance with the congressman's wish that the Government should take no part.

Congressman Watson, member of Congress from the Ninth Congressional District of Pennsylvania, was a worthy and eminent representative of one of the oldest and most prominent families of Bucks County.

His great, great grandfather, Dr. Thomas Watson, who married Eleanor Pearson, of Robank, in Yorkshire, came from High Moor, Cumberland County, England, in 1701, purchased 450 acres in Buckingham Township, Bucks County, settled here and practiced medicine. He was a justice of the court of Bucks County for many years, and otherwise prominently identified with the affairs of State and county. He and most of his descendants were consistent members of the Society of Friends, having brought a certificate from Friends' Meeting at Parsdys Crag to Friends in Pennsylvania, dated 7th mo. 23, 1701.

Dr. John Watson, son of Dr. Thomas and Eleanor (Pearson) Watson, was a successful physician and like his father, prominent in public affairs. He was a member of the Colonial Assembly for 16 years. He son, John, was a distinguished surveyor; Thomas Penn offered him the office of surveyor-general in 1760, which he declined.

Joseph Watson, son of Dr. John Watson, was a resident on the paternal homestead in Buckingham Township. He married Mary White.

Mitchel Watson, son of Joseph and Mary (White) Watson, was born on the paternal homestead in Buckingham Township. He married Anna Bacon.

Henry W. Watson, son of Mitchel and Anna (Bacon) Watson, was born June 24, 1856, on the paternal homestead in Buckingham Township. On the maternal side he was a lineal descendant of Sir Nicholas Bacon, lord keeper to Queen Elizabeth, whose grandson, Nathaniel Bacon, emigrated to America in 1637, located at Barnstable, Massachusetts. Mr. Watson was educated in private schools, and read law under Hon. F. Carroll Brewster, of Philadelphia. He was admitted to the Philadelphia bar in 1881, and began practice the same year.

PARIS.—(INS)—Flowers and feathers, ostrich tips, pheasants and nageoir fancies of all varieties will be very important for fall.

Reboux is using little ostrich tips and crasse akrettes on hats fashioned of a fabric of velvet frise type but far more lustrous. There are quills, mercury wings and lacquered feather flowers in nacre effect. Madame Juliette Micolle is wearing a set from Suzanne Talbot of cape, hat and gloves. The waistband cape is entirely of flat nacre feathers which trim the square toque and cuffs of the gloves.

Tiny ostrich plumes nod on draped velvet toques, the kind Grandmother used to wear and adaptations of the beret in cotton velvet chenille have feathers set at the back. Panned velvet caps have bunches of feathers, one above the other, at the side.

Sports hats sport little quills from the wild duck and guinea-fowl. Rose Valois forms a feather triangle which makes a brim of contrasting color for a hat that is worn crownless for the evening. They are bright red alternated with mustard-yellow in small tufts, forming a little round toque.

IDLE SPECULATION

Sleep, everybody knows, is that state of the body when the normal activity of the nervous system is so far reduced that self-consciousness and consciousness of surroundings are entirely wanting or at a low ebb. But what causes sleep nobody seems to know with certainty nor can scientists agree.

Old theories are that this state is brought about by congestion of blood in the brain, or by lack of blood there, or by auto-intoxication or by some peculiar action of the nerve cells.

Then there is a new theory just advanced before the British Association for the Advancement of Science. The father of this brain child concludes that sleep is controlled by the amount of iodine in the blood, sleep coming when the amount of iodine is reduced.

These are only theories or hypotheses, it being known only that the protozoa do not sleep, indicating that somewhere in the process of evolution it became necessary if life were to continue for it to have periodic times of rest and unconsciousness.

Insomniacs and scientists can do all the worrying about what causes sleep, those who sleep well, or too well, being content with Shakespeare's explanation that it is "tired nature's sweet restorer which knits up the raveled sleeve of care." Nor would knowing its cause or source do anybody any good unless science found a way of controlling it at the same time. Turning the supply on and off like hot water would be a wonderful thing, especially for mothers on school mornings and employers on sleepy afternoons.

DISAPPEARING FURS

In spite of the protection that has been given game and the efforts of organized sportsmen to perpetuate the art of Nimrod, the tendency in the United States is toward game farms and fur plantations. Hunting, once a business for many Americans, is now but a sport, and it is feared that it will eventually disappear even as a sport.

Once there was good hunting for everyone; now there is fair hunting at the best for some and no hunting at all for many. And with the exception of relatively small wilderness areas there would be no hunting for none but for the conservation and propagation work which has been in progress in a number of states for several years. Protection was not enough because it did not come until little wild life was left to protect.

It is a fact that the public is more concerned with conserving hunting as a sport than it was in conserving game for food when wild life was the source of much of the nation's food supply.

The United States, once one of the world's principal exporters of furs, now imports twice as much as it produces. And a large part of the country's fur output comes from "farms."

Lives of great men oft remind us that you can be a wizard in one line and frightfully dumb in others.

The discovery of a Turkish towel dating back to 2,000 B. C. was probably made in a tourist cabin.

Another way to keep from growing old is to assume that the single headlight of the approaching car is the left one.

Echoes of the Past---

By Louise White Watson

King of Humorists

There is ever a demand in our library for "Tom Sawyer" and for "Huckleberry Finn." One reason may be that these books are on the prescribed reading list for the pupils of the public schools, but once read, the reader is enthusiastic in bringing them to the attention of his friends, wishing them to have the same enjoyment as did he in reading into the lives of two of America's never-dying youths. Ninety-eight years ago, November 30th, one was born who later became the spell-blinder of all youth and reached far into the years of thousands of others. Samuel Langhorne Clemens—Mark Twain—author of these laughter-giving books. One recalls hearing, years ago, of a librarian's indignation in having youth calling for these books. At last, her patience exhausted, she exclaimed, "No! We haven't those books, and as long as I have any say, they will not be shelved here. Boys know enough mischief without having books point out additional trickery to them." Who ever heard of teaching mischief to childhood? Why, the angels just gathered up a big bunch of it and tossed it into the cradles and it grew as the babies grew and was on hand when the newly-opened eyes of hero-dom glanced around on an investigation.

But were they blessed, as was Tom, in making the on-looker not only envious but eager to wield the whitewash brush, many fences would be whitened and every one happy. I always admire Tom's ingenuity in that deal and have wished I had been equally brilliant on that day when old Sol sought us out for special favor, the day we whitewashed that high board fence around the backyard at the M. E. Church here. I am smiling as I write, recalling one of the laborers, Mrs. Holman, a native of Canada, who with sun-bonnet pushed back, caught around the neck by its strings, she brushed the perspiration from her face and forcibly ejaculated, "I think the man who invented whitewashing should be shot!" And the fence smiled as the brushes applied the white veneer. In Canada, she explained, they red-coated everything.

Fitting

Isn't this a fitting description of Mark Twain, given in an article on his life?—"Mark Twain had a Santa Claus pocket for humanity." And again, "He had delight for the small boy and entertainment for the jaded king." So had the "Miller of the Dee" as he whistled and sang through a busy life.

The Clemens Homestead

Just a one-story house with a lead-to over the front door, in Florida, Missouri, came one who, after receiving a common school education, became in turn compositor, Mississippi pilot, a Confederate soldier, a Nevada newspaper reporter, gold miner and lecturer. His fame awakened in 1869, when he wrote that book, "Innocents Abroad." Later came "Pudd'nhead Wilson," and others all showing his remarkable fund of humor. What victories he achieved before death claimed him, April 20, 1910, the world knows. One of the many honors conferred upon him was on November 19, 1921, when Marshal Poch laid the cornerstone of the new home of the American Academy of Arts and Letters in New York City, a dream of Mark Twain's materialized in granite and stone. This self-made literary man, who is said to be the Tom Sawyer of his book, in his meager and disheartening surroundings of semi-poverty, began his career just a few years after four contemporaries and friends, James Russell Lowell, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, Ralph Waldo Emerson and William Dean Howells, did the New England atmosphere settle on these artists and did the elements of Missouri toss the wealth of humor into Twain's life? Even in boyhood when want tried to push him to the wall at his father's death, when only twelve years old, he struck out for work and found it as an apprentice to a printer, working for his board and clothes, "more board than clothes," as he later characterized it. But the board must have been nourishing and in sufficient quantities lest such a brain as he possessed and which all through the intervening years has fed that which hungered, would not have developed as it did. The clothes, were it today, would consist of this and that, as the recipe books say, a pinch of this, a dash of that, and behold! the well-clad man of the surf.

His Guests

From semi-poverty to fame, indisputable fame, the fame that lives! At Mark Twain's sixty-seventh birthday dinner, given by Col. George Harvey, at the Metropolitan Club, there was a privately printed book presented as a souvenir which records the tributes he received from the Flower of American Literature. The speakers that evening, who paid homage to him, included the oratorical wealth of the nation. Was any one omitted? They came hurrying from cities and outlying districts to add their tribute of love and admiration to "Little Tom" of other days. Chauncey Depew eulogized him as "the most delightful man in English letters." St. Clair McKelway declared that parts of his works comprised "some of the most dainty, some of the most earnest, and some of the most dignified expressions in our English tongue." They emptied their pockets of appreciable wealth as freely as did the boy who pleads with Tom for permission to whitewash the fence. They, too, fairly turned their pockets inside out to pay tribute to this man, who, while visiting in Europe found his apartments a court, and was chosen by the English for the "national author of the English-speaking world."

His Philosophy

Mark Twain ever contended that life should begin with old age and end triumphantly with the joys of youth, where a dollar will buy the universe then, but when old age lays the dollar in your hand, there is nothing worth buying. He writes, in a letter refusing an invitation to an important function: "When I was a boy in Missouri I was always on the lookout for invitations but they always miscarried and went wandering through the aisles of time; and now they are arriving when I am old and rheumatic and can't travel and must lose my chance. The whole scheme of things is turned wrong end to." He gave as his reason for writing "Joan of Arc," anonymously, was he meant the book to be a serious one, but were it to appear as work of Mark Twain his readers would find humor where no humor was intended. Is it a case of "Once a humorist, always a humorist"? But Mark Twain's hosts of readers will ever insist on his wealth of humor.

HULMEVILLE

Mrs. Edwin M. Lathrop, Middletown Township, will be hostess at the monthly business meeting of the Ne-shaminy M. E. Ladies' Aid Society tomorrow evening.

The week-end was passed by Miss Myrtle Egly, Hulmeville; and Mr. and Mrs. Otto Brown and daughter Eleanor.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

Slug's villainous eyes peering from out the mass of whiskers filled Cavanaugh with a desire to explode with laughter.

"Don't put those eyes on me that way, Slug—I can't stand it!" he cried, struggling to keep from roaring. "You look like a bilious possum!"

Slug growled in his whiskers. "Quit your kidding, Lucky. Want the cops to recognize you and pick us up?"

This wisdom was too obvious to be ignored. Cavanaugh removed his coat and knotted the red handkerchief around his neck. The perfection of the disguise lay in its simplicity.

"I figured I might find you at her house," said Slug. "Ever since Poletski started gunning for you I've been sitting on a hot stove. You know it was him that blasted the Santos dame, don't you?"

"Certainly I know it," said Cavanaugh.

"If the dumb cops hadn't grabbed you up I know you would have taken care of the behunk yourself," went on Slug. "Matter of fact, I had a notion to soften his skull myself last night, but I thought maybe I ought to talk to you first."

"Forget that idea," Cavanaugh told him firmly. "A dead Poletski won't do me any good. I owe him to Mulrooney. That Kruger job doesn't matter but I've got to clear my name about Annette Santos."

Cavanaugh was not thinking of clearing his name or protecting his life as major obligations. The main job was to deliver Poletski to Mulrooney in exchange for Mulrooney's silence about Leni Luneska.

With Mulrooney satisfied the other thing wouldn't matter so much.

"You ought to be able to beat that Santos rap easily," said Slug. "Ought to, yes, but they can make it tough for me if they want a goat," said Cavanaugh. "Mulrooney knows I didn't kill that girl. They've plenty of witnesses that heard the shot come from outside my apartment. Some of them saw a man climbing down the fire escape. It was bad enough to have the girl killed in my apartment without being arrested for murdering her."

Cavanaugh felt better after unburdening himself. He was not complaining, merely stating facts. "You certainly got plenty against Poletski alright," said Slug judicially. "A guy like that don't deserve no consideration."

They were driving down Santa Monica boulevard toward the neighborhood of the Paramount Studio. In this locality there would be any number of men similarly garbed, and the chances were a thousand to one against recognition. Until they decided what to do, the vicinity of a major studio was safe territory. In the midst of his whiskers, Slug struggled with an ethical problem.

"I know exactly how you feel," he said thoughtfully. "Poletski ought to be ventilated, but it's an unpleasant job. I mean, it's unpleasant for a man like you. Me, I don't mind it so much."

"—that's the dumb way," said Cavanaugh decisively. "I never thought I'd see the day when I'd turn anybody over to the coppers, but Poletski's got it coming."

Slug's voice became troubled. "Myself, I'd rather give him the business."

Slug had worked on only one job with Poletski and—since the man had tried to kill Cavanaugh—he no longer had any standing as a pal.

Slug's voice became troubled. "Myself, I'd rather give him the business."

The bond between Slug and Cavanaugh, according to any code, automatically put Slug wholeheartedly on the young gambler's side.

"Another thing we've got to consider," Cavanaugh went on, "is to keep from involving you and the other boys I'm not going to do anything that will get you in wrong. Slug, if anybody gives Poletski the rod, then the Santos murder remains a mystery."

It was a mystery beyond Slug's ability to solve.

"As far as Poletski's two partners are concerned—they screwed out of town already," Slug said. "They're practically strangers to me, and I don't think Poletski knew 'em very well neither. You needn't worry about them. Far as I'm concerned, I'll be okay. I can take it on the lam myself if it will help you any."

There was something ridiculous about the man, but Cavanaugh was touched. Slug, beyond doubt, was a public enemy but he had the virtue named loyalty, at least.

"You're a swell guy, Slug," said Cavanaugh with sincerity.

They were both thinking the same thing. It was going to be up to Cavanaugh alone to deal with Poletski.

Cavanaugh knew that he would have to tighten his brain and squeeze out an inspiration.

The problem that confronted him was a matter of intelligence. He did not want to kill Poletski. He had not even wanted to punch Mulrooney on the chin. Of his own accord, Lucky Cavanaugh was the best-natured fellow in the world, but there was now a tightening in his nerves that told him the time was at hand to get ready for action.

"If you say the word I'll take the whole proposition off your hands and settle it myself," said Slug.

They were still driving around aimlessly. They had passed several policemen, but the battered car with its two costumed characters

HANDBAGS WITH VERY FANCY HANDLES SEEN, PARIS' SMART PLACES

By Alice Langelier
(L. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS—(INS)—Handbag handles, highlight fall wear, with a brand new fastening on the tailored bag, in a larger, roomier, underarm shape. At either side of the top are two handles of plaited leather which pull away from each other to open the bag, but the actual clasp is at the joining of the metal frame at one side.

Many new bags have large chain handles, stretched from one side of the top to the other in classic style, and sometimes with metal links of the chain interspersed with colored stones so that the handle becomes a most decorative part of the bag.

Others have the handle which goes up straight from the center. One smart model in black antelope has a narrow handle of the same leather passed through buttonholes at the top of the sides, tipped off by large turquoise buttons.

Another in beige antelope with this center loop which passes over the wrist fastens by a round bar of shell across the top which clamps down on the bag to hold two sides together.

An envelope type in reseda-green has a strap at the back of the hand and its flap is held by a huge crystal ring that passes under a strap at the side. Handbags of metal mesh and paillettes are mounted on metal and enamel frames. There are new shapes of spangles representing tiny flowers.

The little old-fashioned mesh handbag is also appearing to wear with old-time gowns, with a chataleine for lipstick and perfume, bringing it quite up-to-date.

LAWRENCE TWICE VICTOR AT TRENTON

Herbert Lawrence, Radcliffe street, who is one of Bristol's well known tennis stars, won two matches on Saturday afternoon, in the Trenton Tennis Tournament, which victories advanced him to the semi-finals.

In the second match, Lawrence defeated Swayne of George School, Bucks County, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1. Swayne for a number of years has ranked as the first seeded player in the county. In his young manhood, he had a high ranking among state and national players, including Tilton, who later became international champion.

In the first set Lawrence displayed a lack of confidence, but soon settled down and won the next two sets easily. In the second set Lawrence made thirteen placement shots and eleven in the final set.

In the third set, Lawrence showed his opponent no mercy whatever. In the first game he made two placements and won when Swayne netted a ball and knocked another outside. Swayne handed the second game to Lawrence by making three errors and missing a placement. The third game was easily taken by Lawrence with three placements and an error by Swayne. Swayne failed to score in the fourth and sixth games, but won the fifth due to errors by Lawrence.

In the final game, Lawrence scored three placements and secured the other point when Swayne netted the ball. It was an interesting match throughout, but after the first set Lawrence completely outplayed his opponent, which left no doubt as to the outcome.

The winning of this match places Lawrence in the semi-finals which will be played this evening on the Trenton courts. It will be remembered that Lawrence reached the semi-finals last year only to be retired by Kuser, the Trenton champion. It is possible that Lawrence may meet Kuser again this evening.

Lawrence will have Nelson Green, the Pennsylvania State College champion, as his partner in the doubles matches which begin on Wednesday evening. Last year these two Bristol boys reached the semi-finals in the doubles matches in the Trenton tournament.

Police Dogs Lead Searchers To Banks of Schuylkill River

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28.—(INS)—Fear for the lives of three small Shawmont children, missing since early Sunday, was expressed today when trained police dogs led searchers direct to the banks of the Schuylkill river, at Miquon, about five miles north of this city.

The missing children are Francis Dickson, 8; Henry Dickson, 6; and the latter's sister, Marie, 5. The older boy is the uncle of the two younger children.

They have not been seen since they left home to pick berries in a thickly wooded section, which has been scoured by Boy Scouts, police and volunteers. Police today began a search of the river.

Misses Violet and Helen Burton-wood, 615 Beaver street, spent the week-end at Seaside, N. J.

IN GLOUCESTER

Master Clifford Hagerman, 315 Walnut street, is spending two weeks with his aunt, Mrs. Edith Crawford, Gloucester, N. J.

Emilie Wins Eleventh Straight Ball Game

Next week Newport Road will play a benefit game for an injured player. The Cubans will furnish the opposition.

Jefferson A. C. added another victory to its list on Leedom's field yesterday, taking over the Depression A. C. for the second time this season. Final tabulations were: Jefferson, 7; Depression, 4. The Mules previously stopped the Depression nine, 5-3.

"Bill" Hart twirled steady ball for the winners and although found for eleven hits worked himself out of several holes and stopped several rallies. "Charley" Ithig made four hits to lead the Jefferson club while Keller made three, to lead the losers.

Congressman Watson, 77, Dies of Heart Attack

From that time to the present, he has been identified with many leading institutions in Philadelphia and Bucks County. He was one of the promoters and president of The Peoples National Bank of Langhorne, and The Langhorne and Bristol Electric Railway Company. On November 20, 1895, he drove the first spike in the construction of the first electric road in Bucks County. Mr. Watson continued president of the Electric Railway Company until 1898, when the ownership was changed. For 20 years he was president of the Washington, Potomac & Chesapeake Railway Company. He had been director of the Philadelphia Company for Guaranteeing Mortgages since its inception. He served as director of the Bucks County Trust

Innocent Bystander

George Zaharias, Colorado wrestler, didn't like the decision of Referee Bennie Bortnick on his match with Ray Steele at Washington, D. C., so he gave the "ref" an airplane spin and heaved him over the ropes. The camera caught the act as shown here.

Company. The Langhorne Electric Light & Power Company, the Langhorne Water Company and was identified in the building of modern highways in Middletown Township. He was one of the organizers of the Langhorne Library Company, and its president for several years. He was a member of the Philadelphia Club, the Metropolitan Club, the Union League of Philadelphia, the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, Bucks County Historical Society, and numerous patriotic and social organizations.

Mr. Watson had always been a strong adherent to Republican principles. He represented his party in National, Congressional and State conventions. In 1914 he was elected to Congress from the Eighth Congressional District and had been regularly re-elected to each succeeding Congress, having served upon the Patent, the Insular, the Interstate and Foreign Commerce and the Ways and Means committees. Entering upon his Congressional career, after a wide professional and business experience, his record of service was an enviable one.

Mr. Watson married (first), September 7, 1897, Annie Masden Vaughan, of Wilmington, Delaware. She died in September, 1914. He married (second) November 11, 1922, Cornelia Winder Ball, of Detroit, Michigan.

SENSATIONAL END OF TENNIS MATCH

The dramatic end of the national women's tennis tournament at Forest Hills, L. I., as Helen Wills Moody, shown drinking, defaulted to Helen Jacobs in the final set.

"Not like others"

There are other good cigarettes but they are not like Chesterfield

.... and Chesterfields are not like any other cigarette.

As soon as you light up a Chesterfield, we believe you will notice that they are mild. And before very long, you will certainly notice that they taste better.

These things don't just happen so. There isn't any accident about it. For we put into CHESTERFIELDS all that Science knows and money can buy to make them "satisfy."

Just try them!
